

Let's Celebrate!

Encouraging social interactions is a great way to help children learn about the world! How can we help foster curiosity of other cultures in our homes? Head to the library or use your computer to learn about celebrations from different cultures around the world. Use the hashtag #grow2gether to share what you are learning with us!

Celebrations are an important part of any culture and a good place to start learning about the different cultures of the world. Children get really excited about celebrations, especially birthday celebrations!

Invite your child to explore what birthday celebrations look like around the world. Start with what birthdays look like in your family. Then, grab a book or use your computer to research what birthday celebrations look like around the world.

Talk with your child about similarities and differences between your birthday celebration and the ones that you look up. If you are struggling with where to begin, you can try asking people around you that might be of different cultures and see how their celebrations differ from yours.

Learning on the Go!

- During meal time, are there traditional foods associated with birthday celebrations of different cultures? Find a recipe and try making these foods together!
- Going to a friend's house? Take the time to talk with them about how they celebrate birthdays. Is it similar to your family?

Share with us! We would love to see how you did this activity. Use the hashtag #grow2gether so we can find it!
