Neighborhood Exploration!

Encouraging curiosity and exploration of the world around us helps build acceptance and an understanding of positive social interactions with our peers. How can we help our children practice positive social skills in our communities? Explore a new library or park and make some new friends! Take some pictures and share your adventures with us using the hashtag #grow2gether.

Children are naturally curious and love to interact with people. It is how they learn about the world around them. Teaching our children how to safely socialize with others help build acceptance of different people, a strong community, and a sense of belonging for your child.

When it is time to go out, invite your child to explore a new place in your neighborhood or a neighborhood nearby! You can go to a new park or a different library for story time.

You can support your child by helping make introductions to the new kids around them. You can also show them how to introduce themselves. Model introductions by introducing yourself to the new friend and invite your child to introduce themselves afterward!

Learning on the Go!

- Sharing a meal at a restaurant is a wonderful time to meet new people. Encourage your child to introduce themselves to the waitress/waiter and other restaurant staff that they may come in contact with.
- Going to the store? Encourage your child to meet different staff that they interact with.

Share with us! We would love to see how you did this activity. Use the hashtag #grow2gether so we can find it!
